To say that Sr. Jannette Marie Pruitt has had a full and varied life is an understatement. As she puts it: "I am a person of the church, I am black, Catholic, a mother of three adult children, with three granddaughters and now called to serve the Lord as a Sister of St. Francis of Oldenburg, Indiana". Born in Bay, St. Louis, Missouri, her grandparents were among the first to welcome the first black priest into her area. Together with the townspeople, they also helped to build a school and church for African Americans. So how did she end up joining the convent? She chose to go to nursing school and become a nursing assistant. The rest is history.
